The law court in the Agora, the civic center of Ancient Athens, comes to life in Minneapolis.

501 male jurors over the age of thirty, chosen by lot, sit on wooden benches separated from the large crowd of spectators – including a 27 year old pupil of Socrates named Plato – by some sort of barrier or railing.

Come to experience the trial of Socrates – one of the handful of philosophers who forever changed how philosophy itself was to be conceived – and cast your vote!
